Document 1

I am aware of the following:
I experience and only act upon my experiences.
To experience is an action so all experiences require actions, and all actions create experiences.
The more I experience, the more I learn about what is correct.
Therefore, I try experiencing all.

I do not choose how to reach that goal because I do not freely choose actions. However, I try to store experiences to recall them when needed and to share with others because I don't believe that I'm the only one entitled to discover what's right. Because of the absurdity of actions and subsequent experiences, I will store them in an irrational order.
